DEATH PENALTY:

Time for a Moratorium

The (Republican) governor of Illinois has led the way: Declaring that the death penalty is not fairly applied and may lead to execution of innocent people, he has placed a moratorium on state-sponsored killing in that state.

Now it's time for California to follow suit. With one of the nation's largest death-row populations and public opinion solidly in favor of a halt to executions, California is poised to lead the way toward a re-evaluation of the death penalty throughout the country.

Act now:
